Auction Lot – MED

Reserve £200

Medical/Biomedical Sciences Admissions Interview Practice and Coaching

This lot is a package of mentoring/oversight of one student's UCAS applications in biomedical sciences and/or medicine. It will include consultation and input aimed at optimising the application itself, including in-depth review of the personal statement or its replacement and, for students who will face an admissions interview, preparation for this including a practice interview.

If desired, interview preparation can be aimed generally, or can focus specifically on the particular demands of the more academically-focused admissions processes used at Oxbridge. The package is flexible and its exact composition will be informed by the particular needs of the student. In any case, the participant should leave with a much deeper understanding of what admissions tutors look for specifically in prospective students, and what to expect at interviews.

The session will be delivered by Dr. Alexander Jeans, an academic consultant Neuropathologist who is also a Senior Clinical Research Fellow in neurodegenerative disease at the University of Oxford. He has many years' experience of interviewing for undergraduate medical admissions at a number of Oxford colleges. He has lectured and taught widely on all 6 years of the Oxford medicine course, and was until recently lead examiner for FHS (preclinical finals) Neuroscience.
